The Secretary took upon a line of naulry as to the probability or possibility of Anglo-Sarons tilling the soil, and Rath, after declaring that most or the races mingled here with a great degree of freedom, gave as his opinior that Angle-Saxons would not remain as part of a working settlement, that they would not mix to this extent with Japanese, Chinese, and others, Then Mr. Fisher asked him why this would be the case, and if the Augio Saxons would not mingle socialiv with people of another race.

"They're perfectly willing to give ey to Christianize him," commented Rath, speaking to the relations of Anglo-Saxons here to an individual of another race, "but they don't want him in their midst." He stated further that in regard to this feeling, he sees little difference between the Angol-Saxon born here and the Anglo-Saxon who comes here.
The "Human Side."

Rath was called by Mr. Fisher with this suggestion: "We've heard a good deal of the commercial side in this investigation. Now let's hear something of the human side;" and Rath gave it. He gave as his opinion that the Filipino plantion laborer tends to drift toward the cities and that they seem physically unable to do the work. He doubted if homesteading under present candition is practical. One of the features of his statement was that he absolved the governor from responsibility for conditions here. "I don't see how governor Frear is any more responsible for conditions here than I am." declared Rath. He doubted if social isolation here cuts much figure in the lack of independent small land-holders, stating that aside from the Anglo-Saxon race, the other races mingle freely. Furthermore, he gave as his unqualified opinion there is no more discontent among the masses here than in parts of New England with whose conditions he is familiar. He regards the present industrial conditions as the natural result of indus- race, e will withdraw, trial development, saying that it has

"I wrote the postal card through which it is charged an attempt to raise the race issue is made," said Lorrin Andrews, Kubio's chief engineer, this morning. "I suppose the public is generally interested in learning what the word was that was erased. The word was 'oligarchy.' When I used the word in the first draft I intended it to mean the present incompetent officers of the Republican Territorial and County Central Committees. After the card was printed, I thought that possibly the use of the word might be taken to mean the sugar planters or some other large interest here, so I had it erased. We have no quarrel with the planters and we are not raising the race issue. We simply want to put who will attend to business."

Cannery Employe on Way to Work Meets Death in the Railway Yards

The number 13, suppose to be repre-sentative of all the bad luck in the world, displayed its potency as a male-volent agent this morning in the case of Theodore Alexandrovitch an em-ploye of the Hawaiian Pineapple Co. when on Friday the thirteenth he was run over and killed by freight train No. 13 in the Oahu railway yards.

Shortly after leaving the station, the brakeman stationed on the forward car noticed the man walking in the middle of the track and in the direction of the several canning factories. Despite shouts and calls, as well as the ringing of the engine bell, the man seemingly paid no attention to the warning. Before the heavy train could be brought to a full stop, four cars had passed over Alexandrovitch severing the body and dragging the remains for some distance.

Coroner Charles Rose was summoned and immediately conducted an investigation.
